

IMMUNOLOGICAL METHODS IN MOLECULAR BIOLOGY

Special rules, in connection with the emergencies in semester II of the 2019/2020 academic year:

Lectures and practices will be conducted through distance learning. The requirements of the regular participation in the electronic meetings and the allowed absences are equivalent with that of the conventional attendances, described in the general requirements.

The practical notebooks should be regularly prepared during the semester. The notebooks should be submitted electronically to the practice leaders. The requirements, forms and the submission dates of the practice notebooks will be notified to the students after each electronic practices by the practice leaders. Students should submit their practice notebooks electronically for the practice leaders till the previously appointed dates. The non-compliant notebooks will be refused and sent back to the students for correction before the next electronic meeting.

The evaluation of the course includes properly submitted practice notebooks. The summarised evaluation (the offered final colloquium grade) is based on the results of the written final self-control test and the evaluation of the practical notebooks. The self-control test will be held before the end of the semester. Further details about the grading and the repetitions of the failed exams are equivalent with the statements described in the general requirements.